Q. Whatever happened to Holland Taylor who portrayed Tom Hanks and Peter Scolari's advertising boss on "Bosom Buddies"? D.L., Santa Barbara, Calif.

A. Ms. Taylor has just signed on for the upcoming mini-series "People Like Us," which is a [illegible] by [illegible]. In the series, Holland will portray New York [illegible] [illegible].

Q. Let's get the record straight and settle a bet with my friend. Exactly how many times has Susan Lucci's character of Erica Kane been married on "All My Children"? T.R., Kansas City, Mo.

A. As of this writing, because Erica does move fast, she has been down the aisle a total of five times. So far the "Mr. Kanes" have included Dr. Jeff Martin, Phil Brent, Tom Cudahy, Adam Chandler and Travis Montgomery.

Q. Is talk-show king Larry King married? S.R., Key West, Fla.

Q. Did former New York Met Keith Hernandez move from New York after signing with the Cleveland Indians? And more specifically, did he move to California? J.G., Glen Cove, N.Y.

A. Keith might not don a New York Met uniform anymore, but he is still a true New Yorker. Keith is still very popular in the Big Apple and has many personal and professional ties to the city. For now, Keith is keeping his New York City digs and is currently looking for a studio apartment in Cleveland when he's playing ball for the Indians.

Q. I am simply amazed at the versatility of Michael J. Fox. Where and when did he have time to take acting lessons at such a young age? L.F., Nome, Alaska

A. Michael has never taken acting lessons. The only training Fox has had has been high school drama lessons. Says the actor: "I am not about to turn myself over to anyone else to be fixed or improved. I feel I know myself better than anyone." And why not? To date, his acting track record has been a gold mine for the actor.

Q. Whatever happened to the actress who once portrayed Sybil Thorne on "All My Children?" West Chicago, Ill.

A. The actress in question is Linda Gibbons, and she is currently on the NBC soap opera, "Generations," portraying the role of Jessica. Ms. Gibbons replaces Barbara Sharma who held the original role of Jessica. And if you don't remember, Linda was the original Gina on "Santa Barbara."

Q. Of all the American pop singers, wasn't Elvis Presley the one the Beatles thought had the most influence on them? Some of my friends don't think so. What do you say? Terri, Taos, N.M.

A. When the Beatles were at their height as a group, they gave an interview citing American black music and Elvis Presley as two important influences on their music. However, some time later, Paul McCartney was reported as saying the most influential was Buddy Holly, whom the Beatles felt had more to offer than Elvis since Holly wrote his own music while Presley only sang the music of others.

Q. I used to love to watch a show called "Real People" on TV back in the '80s, and I enjoyed one of the stars, Byron Allen. Will the show ever be revived, and what happened to Byron? Dan S., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. "Real People" ran five years on TV, ending in 1984. Byron, now 28, has his own syndicated comedy show called "The Byron Allen Show." He's also been writing screenplays. He wrote, produced and costarred with Charles Durning in CBS' "Case Closed" some time ago, and is now preparing to do the sequel.

Q. So, when is Shadoe Stevens' new TV series going to come on television? I've been hearing about it, and I can't wait to see my man who I think is just great on "Hollywood Squares." What's happening? Eddie, Paducah, Ky.

A. You probably blinked when tuning in CBS a couple of weeks ago. Shadoe's show, "Loose Cannon," [illegible] of red faces wound up trying to explain how the show was even passed for network airing. It should have had a lot more work done to it before going out on a national feed.

But don't feel too bad about Stevens' fortunes. He's still on "Squares," and he still continues as host of ABC radio's "American Top 40."

Shadoe himself told me that no matter what the business does for him (or to him), "I've already got all the good luck a man can want: a beautiful, wonderful family (he's married to Beverly Stevens, an international model; their child's name is Amber), and I no longer have a drug problem. Everything else is so much less important than having a great family and being free (of drugs)."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by Charles King Cooper

WEEKLY TIP: Don't reveal the confidences of others.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be straightforward in romance. Holding things in makes cooperation more difficult to achieve. Be careful of valuables. Attend to important domestic interests. Try not to let friends interfere with what has to be done. Avoid self-deception.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Higher-ups are inconsistent in attitude. Though you are direct, others are less forthright. Avoid a tendency to worry over trifles. Attend to financial affairs. Balance your accounts. However, the advice of others may be faulty now. Rely on your own judgment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a time for new beginnings. Be the person you want to be. Be careful not to overspend. Watch judgment in career matters. You'll get some good advice, but others aren't anxious to lend a hand. Undercurrents affect close relationships. Catch up on back work.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Invitations come your way now. Work duties compete for your time, however. Save time on your schedule for both work and play. Responsibilities in connection with a child or dear one may interfere with work progress. Still, initiative brings you some gains.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You'll have mixed feelings about a trip. A relative may not want you to go away at present. The evening hours are mildly deceptive. Talking with a possible business partner is favored, but it's not the time to sign papers. Expect some complicated negotiations.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The accent is on partners and other close ties. Try not to let money become an issue between you. Don't come on too strongly. Work preoccupies you now. Rise above a disappointment and make a new beginning. Don't let a lack of confidence undermine your efforts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Romance is in the picture now, but avoid clandestine involvements which in some way could backfire on you. Accent discretion. You're comfortable at home base now, but friends who have problems could involve you in some ways. Save time for yourself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Let loved ones know how much you care. Talks with higher-ups could break down. You find it hard to reach agreements at present. Advice you receive from others now could be faulty, especially concerning finances. You receive a gift that makes you happy.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Others are attracted to you now, but you may receive some unwanted attention, too. An intimate matter may trouble you somewhat. If you'll take a close friend into your confidence, you'll be better off. Otherwise, strain could develop between the two of you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Luncheons with close ones should be fun. However, pressing work commitments may interfere with your social plans later. You'll make a good impression on a higher-up, but still you shouldn't mix business with pleasure. Be businesslike in behavior.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Though you're certainly welcome at a distant place, family obligations may conflict with travel plans. Don't neglect responsibilities. You may receive a gift or a favor, but it's not a good time to sign papers or make agreements. Always be sure to read the fine print.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Cordial relations now with others, especially loved ones, are highlighted. Do be careful not to go overboard spending money. Accent moderation. Good will aids you in work endeavors, but the pressure and responsibility are heavy now. Pace yourself and don't get over-tired.

Speaking of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

There are many myths about the prostate and its function. Many readers seem to be confused when they write me about the prostate and its related problems.

The prostate gland usually is about the size of a walnut. It lies next to the urinary bladder. It almost always completely surrounds the urethra, the thin tube through which urine is emptied from the bladder. When the prostate gland becomes enlarged, especially during middle age and in the elderly, pressure is made on the urethra interfering with the free flow of urine. This accounts for the symptoms of urgency and frequency of urination associated with the feeling that the bladder is not really completely empty after urination. Sometimes a feeble stream and difficulty in starting urination is associated with a large prostate.

The reason the prostate becomes enlarged has never been entirely determined. It is thought that some change in the hormone balance may be responsible. A myth about the prostate is that it produces sperm and that it is therefore related to fertility. This is not so. The prostate produces a lubricating fluid that carries the sperm which is produced in the testicles. By a simple rectal examination, the size, the shape, and any enlargement of the prostate gland can readily be determined.

Infections of the prostate can be treated with antibiotics and by rectal massage of the prostate. When the symptoms become marked and when there is retention of large amounts of urine in the bladder, surgery is usually indicated.

There are two main techniques for the removal of the prostate or part of it. One is know as the transurethral resection. This operation is done through the penis through which a cystoscope is introduced under anesthesia. Another procedure is to do this by making an incision above the pubis and removing the prostate. The choice of operation depends entirely on the findings of the condition of the prostate and the decision of the surgeon who weighs all factors before arriving at such a conclusion.

The operation is a safe one. Anesthesia today is remarkably uncomplicated and safe. People who have a combination of urinary symptoms must not delay examination of the prostate.

Paint & Household
by Bob D'Angelo

Q. I read where you test products on pieces of wood, then throw them in your yard to see how they hold up. I've got one here you may be interested in. For an inexpensive old pine finish, try making a stain from strong tea. When you've achieved the color you want, give it two coats of white shellac. V.T., Huntington, N.Y.

A. I must admit I don't think this one will fly. I conjured up a version of seeing a box of tea bags with the label Jasmine Tea and Wood Stain, but then I thought if it works, the label would read "Bob D'Angelo's Jasmine Tea & Wood Stain," so off I went to my lab (kitchen sink).

I was clandestinely soaking my wood moulding in a cup of strong tea as suggested when who should come calling, but my dear friend and competitor Peter Clemmons, owner of North Shore Painting and Plastering. I attempted to block Peter's vision of my project. However, he was much too astute. "Why are you dunking that wood moulding in that cup of hot tea?" Peter asked.

Two thoughts raced through my mind if I were to tell the truth. The first, if this experiment turned out to be a flop, Peter would surely tell the guys in the paint department at Bernsteins, and I would never live it down. More importantly, if it worked, you would have two jasmine tea and wood stains to choose from, mine and Peters. So I lied. I simply said, "Oh, I thought it was a doughnut." The mystery remains to be solved. Who knows? Someday I might see your name on the box of Jasmine tea and wood stain.

Home hints

HAIR-ORNAMENT HOLDER — I have long hair and therefore I have lots of accessories — combs, barrettes, etc. They made a mess in the bathroom, so I made myself a hair ornament holder.

I have a small cupboard in my bathroom where I keep all my personal articles. I got some one-inch ribbon and some fancy tacks. I tacked eight separate lengths of ribbon horizontally on the back of the door. I was then able to attach all my combs, barrettes and other hair accessories to the ribbons.

Now I can tell at a glance what I have and can easily find anything I want. Janet P., Minneapolis, Minn.

DIET TIP — It seems I am forever dieting and when dieting, it is important to drink eight to 10 glasses of water a day. This was always difficult for me. I mean, who actually likes to drink that much water? Certainly not me!

So, to try to help, I bought my very own special glass. It is very attractive and I use it all the time. Whenever it is empty, I refill it. It serves as a constant reminder of how great I'm going to look. Rita J., San Antonio, Texas

PLASTIC WRAP — One of my least favorite chores is trying to get a plate clean after using it when flouring chicken. After dipping the chicken in either milk or egg batter and then rubbing it in flour, the plate is a terrible mess. I scrub and scrub and eventually it comes clean.

Now, before I start cooking, I cover the plate with a piece of plastic wrap and then put the flour on it. This way I simply roll the flour and everything up and throw it away. This sure made my meal preparation much easier. Susie I., Silver Spring, Md.

DEAR DIANE

by Diane Van Arsdale

DEAR DIANE:

My husband and I have recently been married. Shortly after our return from our honeymoon, my mother-in-law showed up in town. She asked if she could stay with us for awhile until she could find an apartment of her own. I think this is very inconsiderate of her, considering we were just married. I know my husband loves his mother, and I like her too, but not enough to have her living with us. We are just starting our life together, and it is very difficult to do with her watching our every move. She's now been here three months already, and there's no sign of her leaving anytime in the near future. I've mentioned it to my husband, and he feels the same way that we need time alone. However, he said it's hard for him to ask his own mother to leave. Please give us some advice on how we can go about doing this without hurting her too much.

NEWLYWEDS

DEAR NEWLYWEDS:

I don't see any other recourse but to sit your mother-in-law down and tell her exactly how you feel. Mincing words in a situation such as yours will only be counterproductive. You have to be straightforward all the way with this. It's hard enough to adjust to married life when two people are by themselves. Having a parent living with the couple is just twice as difficult.

If you're concerned about where she's going to live, why not go about finding her apartments to look at? That alone is more than a hint to her that she's worn out her welcome. Perhaps you and your husband could do this together. Set aside a weekend to take Mom to view housing. If you and your husband present a united front, that will be even better. Good luck.

DEAR DEX

by Dexter Dyer

DEAR DEX:

My 16-year-old daughter has been seeing a 23-year-old man. I asked to meet him, and she invited him over. I met this man, and he seems very nice to me. He has a good job and doesn't seem to be a person who's on drugs, or drinking. They seem to care about each other an awful lot. He treats her quite well, and makes sure their dating doesn't interfere with her schooling or her responsibilities here at home. The problem is, my husband is giving me a hard time about letting this man see our daughter because of their age difference. I continue to fight my husband on this issue, and will go on until this man proves himself unworthy of our daughter. I might add, since our daughter has been seeing this man her grades in school have gone up considerably, and she's even more responsible here at home. She seems so happy to me that I can't ask her to stop seeing him. He always makes sure she's home by her curfew, and so forth. I know some kids her age are into drinking and drugs and are very irresponsible, so I feel even though there's the age difference and she's a minor to him, she's better off in the long run. What do you think? Am I so wrong to let her see him under these circumstances?

MOM

DEAR MOM:

As a general rule, I would say the age difference between your daughter and this young man is too vast. However, every situation must be judged on its own merits. Your daughter sounds responsible and mature beyond her 16 years and seems capable of handling this relationship. The young man also sounds respectable and on the level. If he had some ulterior motives concerning your daughter, I tend to doubt he'd agree to meet you and your husband.

As for your husband's objections, I think perhaps the best thing to do is have a family meeting with everyone involved, including your daughter's boyfriend. I think clearing the air will help a lot in this situation. Your husband needs to be reassured that this relationship is not destructive, and I believe this will accomplish that goal.

Antiques and Collecting
by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Q. I just found a box of old fountain pens in my grandfather's desk. I know some old pens are valuable, but what should I look for?

A. [illegible] Watermann in the 1880s. He invented a pen that did not leak. Other early pens were made by Walter Sheaffer and George Parker. Pens were made in all sizes, but collectors prefer the largest examples. The pen nib was often solid gold. Bright colors, especially yellow and bright blue from the 1920s, are very high-priced. Cases made of marbleized or pearlized plastic from the 1930s are popular. Engraved patterns on metal, silver overlay or filigree, or mother-of-pearl overlay add to the value. New ink sacs and new pen points can be purchased so most of the old pens can be reconditioned and used.

Q. How old are Pairpoint lamps? I own one with a painted glass shade and a bronze base.

A. The Pairpoint Corporation of New Bedford, Mass., competed with Tiffany for the lamp and decorative accessories market after 1880. They made lamps until 1929, but continued to make glass until 1958. Blown glass shades with hand-painted designs were the specialty. The most expensive, known as "puffies," were blown so the three-dimensional designs seem to have been pushed out from the inside. Other scenic shades were made with paintings on the smooth inside of a glass shade. Shades and bases were sometimes signed "The Pairpoint Corp'n." The bases were often signed with a "P" in a diamond, the company's trademark.

Q. My rocking chair is marked "Wisconsin Chair Company, Port Washington, Wis. U.S. Pending."

A. The Wisconsin Chair company made rockers between 1900 and 1915. They favored chairs of sturdy construction with vaguely Mission styling. Many of the chairs were a combination of several styles.

DOLLARS & SENSE

Tax Rules For Businesses
by Bryon Elson

1. You should file or correct an information return on time every year. The penalty for failure to file or furnish a correct information return increases from a penalty of $15 per return (to a maximum of $75,000) if filed or corrected within 30 days of the due date, to a maximum of $50 per return (to a maximum of $250,000). Lower maximum penalties apply to small businesses.

2. Do not fail to make timely deposits. Penalties increase from two percent of underpayment if there is failure to correct on or before five days after the due date, to 15 percent after failure to correct within 15 days.

3. That includes deposits on withheld income and Social Security, especially after July 31, 1990, when penalties increase for employers who have an amount to be deposited equal or greater than $100,000 in income taxes withheld from employee's wages and FICA.

4. Transfers of property to a corporation controlled by the transferrers or on incorporation of a business when the transferrers control the corporation after the transfer, may result in the recognition of gain if securities are received in exchange for the property. Receipt of stock in exchange for property may still result in a tax-free transfer.

5. When control of a corporation changes, do not be secretive about it. The IRS can impose a penalty if your corporation changes control via a transaction or if there is a recapitalization or other substantial change in the capital structure of a corporation.

6. S Corporations will be required to make estimated tax payments in certain situations. This new requirement applies to S Corporations that elected S status before 1987 and have gains, for those with passive investment income, and for those that have tax attributable to the recapture of investment tax credits.

7. Cellular telephones placed in service after December 31, 1989 can be depreciated as long as sufficient business use can be substantiated, and that the telephone is being used for the employer's convenience and as a condition of employment.

Helping Your Overweight Children

THE IMPORTANCE OF EXERCISE FOR CHUBBY CHILDREN: Contrary to what many people want to believe, overweight children don't always outgrow their baby fat. Actually, chances are unless steps are taken during childhood, the youngsters will probably grow into chubby adolescents who will either continue on to obesity in adulthood, or develop dangerous dieting habits in an effort to deal with their excess weight.
